Work at the plant of the Schatt & Morgan Cutlery company, which had been in progress for several months, was going forward quite rapidly during the present good weather. Vice president of the company C. B. Morgan said he was hopeful the last brick would be laid within the week. The work was to double the capacity of the plant, which employed over 100 men.

THE QUEEN WARRANTY

When you put your trust in Queen Cutlery by purchasing one of our products, you can rest assured that we at Queen take your loyalty seriously. If any of our products ever fail due to workmanship or faulty materials, Queen will fix or replace it free.

Our guarantee is offered in this "no nonsense" manner because we believe in what we do and we know you will too.

We at Queen Cutlery thank you for your business and ongoing support.

THE QUEEN TEAM

Four generations of the Daniels family

The mid-1930s were a difficult time for many American industries including the cutlery industry. Many once famous and thriving cutlery companies met their demise in this era of economic difficulty. One of them, the Schatt and Morgan Cutlery Company of Titusville, Pennsylvania came to an end after nearly four decades of producing some of the finest cutlery known in the history of the industry.

Five former employees, E. Clarence Erickson, Jesse F. Barker, Harry L. Mathews, Geza Revitzky, Frank Foresther who had been previously released from Schatt and Morgan, started their own business in 1922. They named their new company "Queen City Cutlery" after their hometown of Titusville, which was quite often referred to as the Queen City. They developed a thriving contract business and were still doing well when their former employer, Schatt and Morgan closed their doors in the 1930s. At a sheriff's auction, the Queen City Cutlery Company's founders bought all the holdings, land, buildings, and equipment of the bankrupted Schatt and Morgan Company.

In the late 1960s, a time of modernization and restructuring, many cutlery businesses were closing their doors or being purchased for corporate diversification. In 1969 the ancestors of the five Queen City founders felt their business would survive better being a part of a corporate conglomeration, so they sold the business to Servotronics Corporation of Buffalo, New York. In September of 2012, Queen Cutlery was purchased by Ken Daniels of Oak Hill, Ohio. Mr. Daniels, a long time collector and dealer of Queen knives since the 1950's, and a traditional pocket knife expert, is the perfect blend for one of the oldest knife companies in America.

Queen Cutlery still uses some of the old Schatt and Morgan equipment, tooling, manufacturing processes and has become the finest manufacturer of high quality antique style pocket knives and hunting knives in the U.S. The former Schatt and Morgan brand is considered the most valuable collectable pocket knife available. Queen Cutlery branded knives are the finest built user knives on the market.
